

BOMBS FAILED TO KILL OFFICERS WHO SOUGHT TO ENFORCE "DRY" LAW

One Bomb Wrecked the House of Prosecuting Attorney Russell Bowers New Philadelphia, Ohio, While Another Failed to Explode at Home of Safety Director L. O. Haug

BOMB THROWERS TRAVELED ABOUT BY AUTOMOBILE

Police Instituted Search And Arrested Man and Son, Latter of Whom Was Found Hiding Under Porch of His Home—Officials Had Been Active

New Philadelphia, O., June 10.—Attempts were made by bomb throwers to-day to kill Russell Bowers, prosecuting attorney of Tuscarawas county, and L. O. Haug, safety director of Dover, both of whom have been active in enforcement of the prohibition laws.

A dynamite bomb was thrown on the front porch of the Bowers home in New Philadelphia early to-day from a passing automobile. It exploded, blowing the porch to splinters, and wrecking the house, but no one was injured. A dynamite bomb also was thrown on the porch of the Haug home, in the nearby town of Dover at about the same time, but the fuse did not turn and the bomb failed to explode.

Authorities immediately started a search, trailing the automobile, and arrested Nick Nigro and his son, Chamey, as suspects. The son was found hiding under the porch of the Nigro home in Dover.

SIMS MORE CAUTIOUS ABOUT WHAT HE SAYS

Admits That He May Have Used "Too Energetic" Adjectives on Some Occasions.

London, June 10. (By the Associated Press).—Rear Admiral William S. Sims in the course of a 40-minute address at the American Luncheon club to-day said:

"Perhaps we have used too energetic adjectives on some occasions, but let us hope that will be amicably explained away." He paused a moment, and added: "But I am going on doing the same thing."

He made no direct reference to his remarks before the English-Speaking union last Tuesday.

The admiral's declaration to-day brought from the 200 guests a repetition of the uproarious applause which had greeted the remarks of Wilson, vice-president of the American chamber of commerce in London, introducing Admiral Sims.

"He is a stung animal, but he says he will stand by what he has said," Mr. Cross told the assembled company. "I want to assure him that this company will stand with him and so will all full-blooded, true, honest-thinking Americans."

Mr. Cross alluded to the marked cordiality with which Admiral Sims had been entertained by men among the most notable in the country since his arrival in England, and he presented the admiral in the characterization usually applied to Washington—"first in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Notice.
To the taxpayers of the town of Barre: Notice is hereby given that your respective taxes are now due and payable within 90 days from date of this notice. E. R. Nerney, town clerk. Westerville, June 10, 1921.

Notice to City Water Users.
The water department plans to install the new relief valve at the reducing chamber on the Orange main Saturday afternoon, June 11. As the whole city will be supplied from the Webster main, which has a lower pressure, residents of the highest part of the city are advised to draw a day's supply before 11 o'clock of that date.

Hundreds and hundreds of Barre motorists are rather skeptical on the advantages of a cord tire because they believe a cord tire cannot be repaired. Yet they are being repaired every day at the Hastings vulcanizing shop at 211 North Main street—adv.

NOT POSITIVE ABOUT SACCO

But Miss Mary E. Splaine Feels Sure He Was One of Bandits

WHO MURDERED THE PAYMASTER

Two Other Witnesses Failed to Identify the Man Accused

Dedham, Mass., June 10.—Miss Mary E. Splaine, who yesterday identified Nicola Sacco as a passenger in the automobile that fled with the men who killed and robbed a paymaster and his guard at South Braintree on April 15, 1920, testified to-day that while there was a possibility of doubt she felt certain that Sacco was the man.

Continuing under cross-examination at the trial for the murders of Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Miss Splaine's attention was called to her lower court testimony shortly after the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti, when she was quoted as saying: "I don't think my opportunity afforded me the right to say that he is the man." She said to-day that she meant what she said. She had changed her mind as to whether she had any doubt that Sacco was the man without seeing him since his appearance in the lower court, counsel for the defense developed. Originally he was brought before her for identification alone, and was not lined up with other men, she said.

Two eye witnesses of the shooting, who followed Miss Splaine, said they could not identify the murderer. James E. McGilne, a teamster, who was working across the street from the scene of the crime, said he saw one bandit holding Alessandro Berardelli, the paymaster's guard, by the shoulder and shooting him with a black automatic pistol. As the automobile which took the bandits away passed up the street, McGilne said he thought he saw a rifle stuck out through the back window.

Mrs. Anne Nichols, who lived diagonally across from the scene of the shooting, testified that she heard one shot come from a point near a pile of bricks directly opposite the scene of the attack. She saw Berardelli shot down and F. A. Parmenter, the paymaster, run. She saw the bandits jump into the automobile but she said she could not say whether either Sacco or Vanzetti were among the men.

McGilne said the bandits, three in all, were of medium height and looked like Italians.

Two other eye witnesses of the shooting failed to identify the defendants as the murderer.

Edgar C. Langlois, a shore factory foreman, said he heard a shot, opened a second-story window and looking directly down at the disturbance saw two short, dark men, one of them with wavy hair, shooting. As the automobile, which took them away, went up the street he saw a long barrelled gun projecting through a rear window.

Morris A. Colbert, a railroad towerman, who was standing in the back door of a house diagonally across the street from the scene of the robbery saw the two bandits from behind. He could not identify the men, he said.

BETHEL

A large audience enjoyed the graduation exercises of Whitcomb grammar school last evening. The operetta, "Princess Chrysanthemum," was well rendered, members of the class being assisted by several pupils from the grades. Mrs. Eva H. Wilson was presented a handsome pin by the class through Miss Preston. There were 22 graduates, as follows: Blanche Allen, DeLoe, Louise Fisher, Veno, Haikara, George Kennard, Elizabeth Maynard, Margaret Preston, Marjorie Rice, May Spooner, Gordon Batchelder, Paul Chamberlin, Robert Dumas, Everett Dutton, Richard Ellard, Thornton Goodale, Renato Grand, Julius Mason, Raymond Merrill, Manuel Miller, Marie Pain, Wilmond Parker, Ashton Pellier, and credit for the success of the operetta is due to Mrs. Nelson M. Gay, teacher of music, and her group of helpers.

Robert Dumas and Libero Peduzzi are engaged to work through the summer at the Hassan last block camp in East Randolph.

Allen Miller, the seven-year-old son of Mrs. C. Pearl Pierce, broke both bones of an arm yesterday afternoon, when he fell from the top of a cement retaining wall on North Main street, about three or four feet, to the concrete sidewalk, near Mortimer T. Merrill's. He was running on the wall to keep up with a playmate, who was coasting on the sidewalk with a tricycle. He was found on the sidewalk soon after he fell by Alfred Parrott, 2d, who was driving his automobile and, having lifted the boy into his car, he carried him to Dr. Greene's sanatorium, where the bones were set and he was quite comfortable last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Norden of Providence, who were married in that city Wednesday, came yesterday to spend their honeymoon at Mrs. Marion Bowen's and Fred S. Bowen's.

Mrs. E. L. Burnham and her son, Vernon, of West Newbury, Mass., are guests at David Willie's. Mrs. Willie has been ill several days.

James J. Wilson is home from Norwich university.

TALK OF THE TOWN

Miss Mildred Gardner of Fair Haven is the guest of her sister, Miss Clara Gardner, a member of the Spaulding high school faculty.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Perry and Mrs. Harold Perry of Plainfield were in the city yesterday to attend the class day exercises at the opera house.

Mrs. R. N. Armstrong and daughter, Ruth, and son, John, and Mrs. Goldman of Gloucester, Mass., are the guests of Miss Mary Morley over commencing.

The body of Thomas Forbes, cook of the 101st ammunition train, who died in France Dec. 2, 1918, will arrive in the city to-day. Arrangements have been completed for holding the funeral from the Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial will be in Hope cemetery.

W. D. Smith, D. W. McDonald and Dr. Alex Smith went to Greensboro yesterday afternoon and before night had landed the largest lake trout caught out of the lake in years, it not the largest ever caught out of this lake. It weighed 20 pounds and measured 38 inches in length.

Edwin Honsinger, a graduate, with the class of Spaulding high school, called on friends in this city to-day while going from his home in Albany, where he has been visiting for a couple of weeks, to Boston, where he has found employment in a garage. Mr. Honsinger expects to continue studies at the Osteopathic school in Kirksville, Mo., this fall.

Members of the Spaulding high school faculty with the completion of the graduation exercises to-night at the Barre opera house will begin leaving for their respective homes. Miss Mabel Wall goes to Boston to visit before returning to her home in Rockport, Me. Miss Faith Linsley will go to Middlebury and Miss Edith Harwood to her home in Dorset. Miss Doris Binks returns to her home in Franklin, N. H., while Miss Josephine Menotti will go to her home in Waterbury, Conn. Miss Menotti will be one of the faculty who will not be planning on returning to Barre to teach next fall. She has already accepted a position in her home town. Robert L. Ross goes to Pittsford on business before returning to his home in Biddisford, Me. Mr. Ross, who has been mathematical teacher and coach at Spaulding for the past three years, has for next year accepted a position as principal of the Pittsford high school.

The Barre fire department had a busy afternoon yesterday between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock, two calls being received at the station. The first came from the precincts of Depot square, where a grass and rubbish fire in the pit of the Central Vermont engine turntable threatened to destroy the timbers and construction of this railroad property. Paper and oily waste under and about the track timbers caught the fire, which spread to a mass of chemical liquid in the pit before subduing the flames. The fire was extinguished before any damage was sustained to this heavy wooden structure. The second call came from the general alarm box, 143, located at the corner of Blackwell and Center streets. The hands of Mrs. Angelo Asper of 32 Center street pulled the alarm when she learned that the oil stove in the John Ballerini home at 16 Oswald street was wrapped in flames. Mrs. Ballerini, upon returning to the kitchen after having worked for a time in her garden, found the oil stove, which she had left lighted, a mass of flames. Her screams of alarm were heard by Mrs. Joseph Capra of 4 Oswald street, who went to her assistance and without thoughts of her own safety carried the flaming stove to the street. The fire department reached the home in quick order, but nothing but a house filled with smoke confronted them at the arrival at the Ballerini home.

ALUMNI AT THE FEAST

Spaulding High School Graduates Held Annual Banquet

WELCOMED NEW CLASS TO FAMILY

The Annual Business Meeting Followed the Banquet

One of the most appealing events of commencement week of Spaulding high school was the 25th annual banquet of the Spaulding Alumni association, given last evening at Hotel Barre. There were 151 people seated, yet there remained many unfilled chairs and several classes were unrepresented. Nevertheless this association, with a membership dating back to 1894, enjoyed the evening immensely and invited into their ranks the 78 members of the Spaulding 1921 class.

The dinner commenced at the entrance of the hall sounded the call to the several long tables at 8:40, and at the announcement of George Douglas, president of the graduating class, the alumni of every class of Spaulding were called to file to their places at the tables.

With Miss Edna Beard, Vermont's first lady representative in the legislature, first in line by virtue of connections with the class of 1886, the line of march proceeded with Mrs. Perley M. Carr, a classmate of Miss Beard's, second in line, and the high school orchestra of 10 pieces under the direction of Miss Marion Doward sounding the initial note to a pleasant concert that continued all during the feasting time.

A delicious seven-course banquet had been prepared under the hotel supervision, and by a corps of 20 waitresses, the several courses were served in nice order. The banquet and the environment, inspired the several after-dinner speakers and imbued them with a keen sense of humor and wit, especially toastmaster Max C. Fisher of the class of '96, who presided in place of President William McLeod.

Miss Edna Beard, representative of the town of Orange in Vermont's 1921 legislative session, welcomed the class of 1921 into the fold of the Spaulding Alumni association, confident that this class, as all others to leave Spaulding, had been well-trained to meet the problems of life and to become an active part of the alumni association. "Your class is without question the best class ever turned out of Spaulding, and you like all other graduates feel certain of this. In this you are correct as Spaulding turns out a better class each year," was the essence of Miss Beard's welcome address.

The class of '21 had as its spokesman George Douglas, the class president, who not only divulged several interesting anecdotes with considerable wit but also assured this welcoming body of alumni that the class of 1921 would prove a loyal support at all times.

The period of speaking was broken with the sweet tones of a piano solo by Miss Beatrice Papin, '20, in the revelation of Friml's Intermezzo, an accomplishment for which she was highly applauded.

Athletics as ever formed one of the interesting topics of the evening with Allan Johnston, coach of the present baseball squad, championing the cause and good of athletic activities in place of coach Robert Ross. Mr. Johnston declared that the past year had without doubt been the most successful in the school's history. The outlook for the coming year is bright in all athletic lines, yet there is chance for improvement, not altogether with the athletic team themselves but with the school body and alumni body. The school body can improve by having better teaming in cheering and the alumni by giving better support to the teams.

Howard Geake, a baritone, a member of the 1919 class, responded to the invitation for a vocal solo with "The Sky Has a Thousand Eyes." Needless to say, Mr. Geake, who has been a prominent figure in choral societies of Boston university, proved a pleasing entertainer to his fellow associates.

Prize Awards Announced.

The alumni prizes, one for the junior member of the school writing the best short story, and the other the Mathewson improvement prize were awarded by Principal Lyman C. Hunt. Miss Abbie Hayes received the $5 gold prize for the best short story and Porter H. Lord the Mathewson prize, awarded to the student who makes the greatest improvement in the high school course. Mr. Hunt paid high compliment to this young man.

Superintendent of Schools Carroll H. White, ever a happy participant at this occasion, further emphasized the fact that Mr. Hunt had spoken of that Spaulding was by no means a one-track school, rather one of several tracks with scholastics as the predominant and most important. The nine people who first graduated from Spaulding enjoyed the one track, scholastics, but as time has passed the others have been added so that to-day Spaulding activities are absorbed in social and athletic work as well as scholastics. Thorough scholarship and mentally-trained athletes is the end to which we should all work, are the words with which Mr. White concluded his speech.

The attention of everyone now turned to the annual business meeting and election of officers. Reports of the year were read and accepted and the following people elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, Miss Mildred McGilne of the class of 1918; vice-president, Alex. Walker of the 1912 class; treasurer, Miss Lorraine Loran of the 1916 class; Miss Phyllis Ver-coe retains the office of permanent secretary, to which she was elected last year.

With the singing of "Lead Kindly Light," the school hymn, 1921's alumni banquet came to a close as the dining hall clock struck the midnight hour.

INTERESTING CLASS DAY EXERCISES

Spaulding 1921 Entertained Large Crowd at Opera House on Thursday Afternoon.

Before a house overflowing with students, alumni, parents and friends of Spaulding, the class of 1921 departed for an afternoon from the usual sedate and dignified spirit of commencement and gave vent to their merriment in four school years in the annual class day exercises at the opera house yesterday afternoon. Nearly 400 students, including the present senior class, occupied seats reserved for them in front of the orchestra.

A pretty picture was created with the march of the classes down the aisle to the slow strains of the Spaulding march as played by the high school orchestra under the direction of Miss Marion Doward, supervisor of music. Color abounded in the afternoon gowns worn by the young ladies of the three underclasses, and in the class flowers and colors worn by all, each representative of his or her class. The direct contrast was the march of the seniors, each young lady wearing white and the young men attired in the plain blue serge.

George Edmund Douglas, president of the graduating class, opened the ceremonies of the afternoon with a word of welcome. Immediately he called upon Mrs. Doris Gennette Burke for a review of the class history. Miss Burke had arranged her subject carefully and delivered the history of all the important, most wonderful class of 1921 in terms of a metaphor. The different stages or classes in Miss Burke's mind were made to take the form of children of father Spaulding with all their aunts and uncles in the family.

To Louis Eldridge Veale was attributed the task of reading the somewhat long last will and testament of the class of 1921. Next the senior girls' chorus rendered a musical selection in the nature of "The Fairy Dance" by Anst.

In her essay entitled, "With the Top Down," Miss Bernice Mary Davis, winner of third honor, showed much effort and time put to good advantage. Her subject referred to a hasty review of the remarkable scenery of Vermont and New Hampshire in due relation to their historical associations. She touched on the description of many of the points of interest in both states.

Having gained entrance to a dark and strange cave through some unexplainable manner, Miss Mary Melaren Milne gazed into a crystal ball held in the hands of an idol, the Chinese sun god, where was revealed to her the status and actions of the members of the 1921 class many years hence. To Miss Doris Merle Davis had been given the duty of presenting the class ode, "The Open Way," and in it she found plenty of opportunity for good sound advice.

Miss Mary Josephine Locarno made the presentation to the school in words befitting the occasion, and in closing she gave to the school a sum of money to be used for the purpose of buying and erecting lockers to be used by the girls' basketball squad. In the address to the graduating class John Wendell Smith brought to his classmates the real seriousness of this turning point in their young lives. The exercises were brought to a close with "A Song of the Sea," by the senior boys' chorus.

The stage, which had been the object of the class of '22's attention for the past two or three days, was very plainly but appropriately decorated in the colors of gold and white. On the walls a sort of panel effect was used to create the effect of the predominant color and gold for border work.

Above the entrance door at the rear of the stage was a reproduction in coloring made to designate the gold and yet bring out plainly every little feature of the class pin of the '21 class. The class motto, "Knowledge is Power," in shaded letters of gold and white, stretched across the front of the stage.

Few pieces of furniture, one or two palms, and a bank of daisies and butternuts strewn over the footlights just added enough to the remainder of the decorative work as to make it appealing to the eye.

MAN STABBED BY HIS FATHER

Pasquale Coia, 28, Has Two Serious Wounds in Abdomen

GIUSEPPI COIA, 58, GIVES HIMSELF UP

Victim Is on Danger List—They Dispute Over Household Port

With two gashes in the abdomen which may cause death, Pasquale Coia, 28 years of age, of 73 Brook street is at the hospital, and his father, Giuseppe Coia, 58 years of age, of the same address, is under arrest on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill. The affray took place on North Main street late last night after altercations which had been going on for some time, the police say, as the younger man insisted that his father move out because the latter had not paid any board for a long time.

The dispute had reached a stage yesterday afternoon that the younger man called the police, claiming that his father had threatened to shoot him. Chief Sullivan went to the house and investigated the affair, in the meantime asking Giuseppe if he had a revolver. The latter replied in the affirmative and produced the weapon, which was a 22-caliber revolver and was unloaded. Chief Sullivan pocketed the revolver for safekeeping and after advising the parties to adjust their differences left the house.

The next appearance of the police in the case was at about 11 o'clock last night when Deputy Chief Gamble got a telephone call from the North End, telling of a stabbing affray on Main street between Cottage and Central streets. Deputy Chief Gamble and Chief Sullivan went to the scene and found Pasquale Coia to be the injured man.

Pasquale had gone to the office of Dr. P. S. Duffy nearby and sought treatment for two serious gashes in the abdomen.

Dr. Duffy called an ambulance and had the man taken to the hospital, where it was found that the knife blade had slashed the intestines, bringing about a condition to cause apprehension over the young man's recovery. The outcome of the stabbing will not be known for some days, it is said. One wound is on the left side and the other on the right side.

State's Attorney Fred B. Thomas of Montpelier came to Barre this morning and conducted an investigation, bringing about a condition to cause apprehension over the young man's recovery. The outcome of the stabbing will not be known for some days, it is said. One wound is on the left side and the other on the right side.

Investigation by the authorities seem to bear out the belief that Pasquale was the aggressor in the events which led up to the injury to himself. When Chief Sullivan was at the house yesterday afternoon Giuseppe, the father, had promised to move away from his son's home; and that promise was thought to offer a solution of the family difficulties.

However, the altercation broke out at about last night when Pasquale Coia, walking with Guido Rossi, came across his father conversing with John Rossi, a North Main street barber. The meeting between the Coias was the signal of a fresh outbreak of anger. The younger man is said to have upbraided his father and both the companions of the two men endeavored to separate them before any violence should be done. They were unsuccessful and the younger man is said to have struck his father once or twice in the face, the blows loosening Giuseppe's teeth, whereupon the elder man drew a jack-knife from his pocket and slashed at his son.

The blows were vigorously delivered, as the doctors found when they came to make an examination at the hospital. The blade had ripped the clothing and gone quite deeply into the body, so deeply as to puncture the intestines. The wounds were dressed and as possible. There is considerable chance of serious turn in his condition, so that at present he is considered on the danger list at the hospital. The clothing and other evidence in the case has been taken in charge by State's Attorney Thomas to be used in the court procedure to follow, regardless of the outcome of the affray.

Pasquale Coia is married and his wife has a son by a former marriage, her first husband having been killed in an accident at the electric light station. Pasquale is a stonecutter and his father's occupation is that of a painter.

TALK OF THE TOWN

The freshman class of Spaulding high school held a picnic and outing at Caledonia park Wednesday. Various games and sports were the order of the day. Luncheon was served at the park. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morse and Miss Lewin Baker accompanied the class as chaperones. During the day the class presented Mr. and Mrs. Morse a casserole. Mr. Morse has been teacher of mathematics at the school for the past four years, and this year will complete his services at Spaulding.
